Launched in conjunction with the 50th anniversary of the Singapore Press Club, with the kind sponsorship of Citi, the annual awards aim to recognise the excellent work and contributions of media professionals towards building a vibrant media industry in Singapore.

The Singapore Press Club Rising Star Awards seek to celebrate and encourage young professionals (below 35 years of age) by recognising excellence in their craft and lasting impact of their work.

The CDL-Singapore Press Club Sustainability Journalism award recognises a journalist who has demonstrated commitment and passion to leave a better world for future generations through their work in the media in any of the 17 areas outlined in the UN Sustainable Development Goals.

The Singapore Media Industry Hall of Fame, presented by Singapore Press Club and sponsored by Citi, recognises the outstanding contributions of veterans in the media and media-related professions through their long careers in the industry.

Rising Star Young Journalist Awards

In recognition of excellent storytelling and impactful journalism that has helped to promote profound change.

Winner

Nabilah Awang, Journalist, TODAY

Passionate about social causes, TODAY journalist Nabilah Awang strives to give voice to under-represented and unseen minority communities in Singapore. A tenacious journalist who goes the extra mile to connect with her sources, Nabilah has shed light on complex topics such as child abuse, gender equality, as well as race and religion. As a health and community reporter, she has written extensively about the plight of healthcare workers, caregivers and migrant workers.

Winner

Kelly Ng, Correspondent, The Business Times

Kelly Ng covers banking, finance, fintech and sustainability for The Business Times. Ever the versatile correspondent, her stories often confront hard-hitting issues, from the risks and ethics surrounding non-fungible tokens to how the pandemic has widened Singapore's income chasm. She has embraced new storytelling methods, and has a slew of videos and infographics under her belt. Kelly also co-produced two documentaries, one of which, Curtain Up!, premiered at various festivals across North America.

Rising Star Young Digital Journalist Awards

In recognition of excellence in storytelling on digital platforms that created exemplary user experience.

Winner

Rebecca Pazos,
Data Visualization Editor,
The Straits Times

Rebecca Pazos, Data Visualisation Editor at The Straits Times, has received multiple awards for her excellent digital work, including a Silver medal at the Society of News Design's Best of Digital Design for her outstanding portfolio of work. Rebecca is dedicated to telling compassionate, human-centred data stories.

Winner

Chai You Xia,
Senior Journalist, 8World News, Mediacorp

As a digital journalist, Chai You Xia challenges herself with new ways of presenting and producing compelling stories on digital platforms. Her videos have made a strong impact as her storytelling is both heart-warming and thought-provoking. What's more, with her bilingual reporting skills, You Xia is a role model for new journalists. She is also passionate about women's issues and mental health.

CDL - Singapore Press Club Sustainability Journalism Award

In recognition of excellent sustainability journalism that has had a positive impact on public attitudes, behaviours and policies that further the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals.

Winner

Audrey Tan, Assistant News Editor and Science and Environment Correspondent, The Straits Times

Audrey Tan's tireless coverage of sustainability at The Straits Times over a nine-year career has led to reforms in the environmental impact assessment frameworks in Singapore. Her pieces on climate change, biodiversity conservation and carbon markets have been consistently tenacious. She has also embraced new channels, specifically her environmental podcast "Green Pulse" and a series of climate change cartoons in the lead up to COP26.
